Gayle Brandeis grew up in the Chicago area and has been writing poems and stories since she was four years old. Gayle's poetry, fiction and essays have appeared in numerous magazines and anthologies and have received several awards. Her essay on the meaning of liberty was one of three included in the Statue of Liberty's Centennial time capsule in 1986, when she was 18.
In 2004, The Writer Magazine honored Gayle with A Writer Who Makes a Difference Award.
