As author Gail Brandeis writes, Carl Love's "heart shines through these columns," revealing a love for his family and for the place he has called home for 25 years. The author, a journalist who became an elementary school teacher, portrays his changing landscape--the good and the bad--on levels ranging from the political to the personal..., understanding we are all neighbors, no matter where we live. In this book you will find compassion, wit, and wisdom for our time. —Mythic Highland
